DISPATCH - OCT 13, 2012 (10:35 a.m)

BRIDGEHAMPTON, NY

Like a Phoenix, the Birdhouse Auction rises tonight to present its eighth annual fundraiser. The future of the annual fundraiser was in doubt following last year's event. Event organizer-founder Karyn Mannix believed the Birdhouse Auction had run its course because of declining financial response. The event raises money for the Coalition of Women's Cancers at Southampton Hospital.

By all calls, it seemed the Birdhouse Auction would become a part of Hamptons history. Popular demand swayed Mannix and she decided to produce another fundraising event featuring birdhouses made by Hamptons-connected artists and creatives.

"We thought last year would be the last year of the Birdhouse auction," said Mannix. "But due to popular demand, we have returned for our eighth consecutive year. We always hold the auction in October, which is breast health awareness month, in hopes that it will be the perfect reminder for all to get make an appointment with the doctor for your annual health check."

Coalition president Susie Roden said, "This is a large local community event that everyone enjoys—where our community gives back to itself. It is a wonderful event."

Mannix founded the Birdhouse Auction as a way to give back after surviving breast cancer. The fundraiser aims to raise money and awareness of programs available so those stricken with cancer know they don't have to go it alone.
