

Hamptons Museum Shows to Catch Before They're Gone

October 10, 2015

by Pat Rogers

October means Hamptons museums wrap up their exhibitions that opened in summer and now move into fall. Some museums close for 2015 and others unveil their next set of exhibitions. Either way, consider a museum visit before the following exhibitions become Hamptons history.

Temporary Sculpture Installations at LongHouse Reserve

On view through October 10, 2015. LongHouse Reserve's grounds and permanent sculpture collection is open on Saturdays through October 24, 2015.

Each year, LongHouse Reserve installs new sculptures for the season, joining the hundreds of works on view. This is the final weekend to see the 2015 temporary artworks. They include sculptures by Kiki Smith, Takashi Soga, Grace Knowlton, Sui Jianguo and Ronald Bladen.

LongHouse remains open on Saturdays through October 24, 2015, when it closes for the 2015 season.

LongHouse Reserve is located at 133 Hands Creek Rd, East Hampton, NY 11937. Admission is $10. www.longhouse.org.

"Platform: Tara Donovan" at The Parrish Art

Museum

On view through October 12, 2015

Three new works constructed from Slinky® toys by American artist Tara Donovan remain on view at The Parrish through October 12, 2015. Donovan is known for her ability to amplify the innate physical characteristics of everyday objects by transforming them into large-scale works of art.

For the museum's fourth Platform series, Donovan was invited to create new artwork that relates specifically to the museum infrastructure and environment and the works on view. Her art was installed in July 2015.

The Parrish Art Museum is located at 279 Montauk Highway Water Mill, NY 11976. www.parrishart.org.
