

Call for Art: Art Inspired by Water

February 18, 2016

by Pat Rogers

We've noticed a surge of interest in artists working with natural materials to explore how geography contributes to the identity of a community or the ways the natural environment is muse for art. The ocean, bays and ponds are hard to miss in The Hamptons and on East End of Long Island. To celebrate water's influence in art and community, Hamptons Art Hub is issuing a Call for Art with water as muse, subject or as a generating material used in the artwork. Submissions are sought in two categories: Fine Art and Fine Art Photography. Our second annual Call for Art will be judged by a panel with one winner selected in both categories (Fine Art and Fine Art Photography). Each winner will receive a review or artist profile written by Pat Rogers, an award winning writer and publisher of Hamptons Art Hub. The piece will be published online at HamptonsArtsHub.com within six months.

Honorable Mentions will be awarded in both categories and will be awarded a free Directory Listing to showcase their art for one year. A selection of top submissions in both categories will be featured in an online gallery at HamptonsArtHub.com.

Submissions to "Art Inspired by Water" will be accepted through March 13, 2016.

Email submissions to artcallhamptonsarthub@gmail.com. Please send artwork image as a jpeg attachment with artist name, contact information, home town and artwork description (title, dimensions, medium, year made). Original art work ONLY. Artists may submit a short description of their work, their process and a link to their website. Up to three artworks can be submitted.

A submission fee of $35 applies and is payable online with a credit card. Winners of the "Art Inspired by Water" competition will be announced the week of March 28, 2016. The Best Artwork Submissions for Fine Art and Fine Art Photography will publish online the week of March 28, 2016 at Hamptons Art Hub.
