The Full Moon Arts Center, a new addition to the Long Island gallery scene, held its first show with the current artist membership earlier this year. For its second show, the collective is pleased to offer a unique shopping experience in a beautiful setting. Honoring the spirit of the season, buyers can take their new art pieces at the time of the purchase.

“The Full Moon Arts Center hopes to impact our community with engaging events and creative exhibitions,” Ronnie Wiener, founder of the Full Moon Arts Center, stated. “We look forward to seeing you there.”

The Full Moon Arts Center, housed in an 1865 renovated barn and stable, came into existence in 2005 under the inspiration and leadership of conceptual artist Ronnie Wiener, with the express intent of creating a space and environment to allow artists of varying disciplines to create visionary work. Whether art, music, dance, performing arts or poetry, the vision then and now is to allow the spirit of free and unencumbered ideas to flourish, and then to present the result of that effort to the community at large.

Thirteen years later—still under the influence and creative vision of its original founder Ronnie Wiener—a new group of East End artists have banded together to pursue their individual visions in the same collaborative environment. Also part of the collective are writer Ellen Pearlman and artist assistant Sally Pope.
